Are you shaking a chinstrap beard? It may be time to shave | Charles Coates/Getty Images Sport There are signs that they may be on their way out of style, but at least for now, beards are very popular with men. While it would be nice if every man's beard looked as great as Hugh Jackman, the truth is that not everyone can grow a full beard like that. Perhaps more importantly, not everyone wants to do that either. Male facial hair can be styled in more than one way, and it is also still perfectly acceptable to keep your face clean shaven. One facial hairstyle, though, really needs to disappear once and for all, and that's a chinstrap beard. Of course there are many cultural reasons for shave your chinstrap beard. Professionally, it is the appearance that juveniles consider and is not suitable for anyone who wants to rise above mid-management. Few people have negative connotations about the chinstrap beard and associate it with the worst stereotype of the Jersey coast. At the same time, though, the type of association is purely subjective, and obviously enough men like wearing a chinstrap beard that the looks persist. However, there are more objective reasons for shave the chinstrap and go with a completely different facial hairstyle. A man shaved with | Source: iStock First of all, chinstrap beard is very difficult to complete. Acquiring the look that most men will when they choose a chinstrap beard requires constant maintenance, and his style is far from forgiving if you can't perform to touch it two or three times a week. If you don't have a strong beard in the first place, any thin area or patch along the chinstrap will also end up highlighting, making you look much less attractive. I knew some people wanted to grow their facial hair but couldn't grow a full beard, so they tried to shave to chinstrap. A lot of their frustration, it ends up looking worse than if they had just stayed clean shaven. While some men try to use a chinstrap beard to hide the fact that they don't have a ton of facial hair, others use it to try to create an artificial jaw. Sometimes it is because they have a recession chin, and other times it is because they are overweight. Either way, it doesn't work. You just end up looking like a guy with a recession chin and bad facial hair. As a guy with a bit of a recession chin, I really got it. You know that facial hair will hide what is generally considered an unattractive feature of the face. Unfortunately, while the beard Nice to do it, if anything, a chinstrap beard just makes it worse. It's time to shave a chinstrap beard | Source: iStock The biggest problem with chinstrap beards, though, is that they almost always either emphasize or create the appearance of multiple chins. If you already have a double chinstrap chin, your chinstrap beard can also be a flashing yellow sign that shows everyone that you have Chin. It definitely won't hide it. On the other hand, the chinstrap beard also has a habit of creating the appearance of multiple chins in men who actually don't have one. You may not realize it while you're shaving, but it really happens. Most men only realize what they've done when they see a picture of themselves, but once you realize what's going on, you can't see it. Your double chin is just there to see the world, and you can't ignore it anymore. The good news is that it's not too late. If you have a chinstrap beard, you can shave it and start from the beginning of tomorrow. If you're considering one, you don't have to make that mistake. You can still make good choices with your facial hair and go with a style that makes you look more masculine and interesting rather than less.
